

Mobile Phones – Wholesale Trading Updates

Apple iPhone 4 both 16 & 32GB are currently the most sought after model in the market according to www.phonelot.com, with a large portion of all the requests posted on their trading floor dedicated to the Apple Smartphones. Surprisingly, the 3GS is still in demand with a total of 24% of all iPhone requests still directed towards the 3GS models. Supply of the iPhone 4 continues to grow in the parallel market although prices are being maintained from week to week. The initial extortionate prices for the iPhone 4 have stabilized and wholesale prices are now ranging from $720 - $1150.

Blackberry models continue to remain in high demand although suppliers are finding it easier to source models, which has resulted in the stabilization of the prices. The 8520 has overtaken the 9700 as the most desirable model in the Blackberry portfolio, although the recently launched Torch 9800 has already shown strong interest from the retail community

Nokia continue to dominate in the low end market with the 1208, 1661, 1616 all in demand and subsequently increasing in price over the past month. The relatively new C5 remains the most wanted Nokia on phoneLot for the second week running with the average wholesale price now at €115.

Samsung are seeing some major interest in their new S8500 Wave, the S5230 also continues to be in demand. Supply of all Samsung models remains high and as a result the prices have fallen across the majority of the Samsung portfolio.
