

iPhone 4 Global Price Variations

Since its launch on 24th June this year, Apple's iPhone 4 has been the most sought after phone in the parallel market. Recent reports from www.gsmexchange.com have shown that demand has been substantially higher than supply across the globe, even in markets where official Apple agents are distributing. This statistic has forced the price to increase and depending on where in the world you buy, you can expect to pay between $725 up to $1,153 for wholesale iPhone 4 phones www.phonelot.com, the world's fastest growing online trading platform for mobile phones and accessories has been tracking the price variations for the iPhone 4 16GB. US wholesalers are the cheapest distributors with prices running as low as $725. An average wholesale price for the phone in the USA stands at around $760. The UK wholesalers are selling for considerably more with the cheapest registered on phoneLot at $951 and Hong Kong is the most expensive with its cheapest offer starting at $1,153.

The iPhone 4 price is expected to hold for the immediate future although the recent influx of stock should encourage a minimal price drop. For the first time since the launch of the iPhone 4, wholesalers have been able to collect larger quantities of the phone and the average quantities available from distributors on www.gsmexchange.com has now risen from 10 – 20 to over 100 pcs.
